

November 29, 2003

To Whom It May Concern,

If an attorney's services are the answer to your problem, you are in a difficult situation indeed. I lived the nightmare; after building my company from a startup into a thriving enterprise, I sold my interest to an investor group who promised to grow the business and care for the employees. Through sheer incompetence they ran it into the ground within six months, laid off all the employees, then refused to honor their contractual payments. I was without both the business and any reward for my years of hard labor.

Robert Dewberry came highly recommended. In addition to years of experience in business litigation, Bob had a reputation as tenacious attorney. Mr. Dewberry worked diligently on my case and kept me well-appraised of all progress, helping me sleep at night during the difficult times.

Bob reviewed the sales contract and gathered the facts of the case from myself, previous employees, and previous clients. He then laid out his strategy to a legal system novice with clarity and insight. Bob's tactics were key to our eventual victory. He consistently applied the correct amount of pressure to the defendants at the right times to stop their foot-dragging through the legal process. Bob's decision to hold depositions at the beginning of the legal process brought the facts of the case to light early. During depositions, Bob hammered away at the deponents until the truth of their stories was uncovered, which convinced even the defendant's attorneys agreed their clients had little chance should the case go to court.

The case never went to trial. Bob's representation of my case was so thorough and convincing that we settled for the complete amount owed. I would not have received what was due to me without the representation of Robert Dewberry. He easily met the expectations of his glowing reputation. Bob's years of experience in business litigation showed as he predicted most of the defendant's tactics well in advance. I am acquainted with many attorneys, and I recommend none more strongly than Robert Dewberry.

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Mark Pieter". The signature is written in a cursive, slightly slanted style.

Mark Pieter